President Orders Broad Reorganization of Navy

Truman Abolishes Fleet Commander Post Now Filled By Adm. E. J. King

Reshuffle Is Designed To Take Advantage of Improvements Suggested by Wartime Experience

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—The navy is to be reorganized.

The reshuffle ordered by President Truman is designed to take advantage of improvements suggested by wartime experience.

Changes will include abolition of the position of commander-in-chief, United States Fleet, whose major functions are transferred to the chief of naval operations.

The broad reorganization will take into account the grouping of navy business into military matters, general and administrative affairs, business and related industrial matters.

Secretary Forrestal has signed a departmental order continuing Fleet Adm. Ernest J. King in his present position of commander of the fleet during a brief period of transition until the new organization contemplated by the president's order is put into full effect.

King also continued to hold his formal commission as chief of naval operations.

Improvements Are Indicated

The order was signed two days ago, but made public only today. A White House statement said its purpose is to assign duties among the various agencies of the navy accordingly.

The order specifically recognizes that navy business falls into three broad divisions—military matters, general and administrative affairs, business and related industrial matters.

The order requires that the navy organization structure "shall reflect this fundamental division of functions and direct the secretary of the navy to assign duties among the various agencies of the navy accordingly."

Board Is Set Up

The White House said Secretary Forrestal has set up an informal board under the chairmanship of Undersecretary Ralph Bard to recommend a specific plan of organization based on the executive order.

Principal powers of the fleet commander in chief conferred upon the chief of naval operations are the duties of the principal naval advisory to the president and "command of the operating forces comprising the several fleets, seagoing forces, sea frontier forces, district and other forces, and the related shore establishments."

BALTIMORE, Oct. 1 (AP)—A report today that Baltimore police were holding a general in connection with a shooting case sent two military policemen to headquarters in double-quick time.

They found the police holding a "general" all right—General Quince, 23-year-old buck private from nearby Fort George G. Meade.

Administration Requests Tax Cut of $5,000,000,000

House Approves Atomic Bomb Study; Committee Splits on Elliott Roosevelt Loan

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—Federal taxes will drop next year. That became clear today.

Where and how much is a question. But the ball is rolling fast. The administration doesn't want it to roll too far. It asked Congress today for a $5,000,000,000 cut in 1946 taxes. And no more now, please.

There was immediate Republican criticism. A leader said it wasn't enough. The public need not expect the final result for weeks.

The administration gave Congress solemn news too. There may be 8,000,000 jobs by spring.

This came from Reconstruction Director John W. Snyder. He was optimistic, though. He said the aim is for a forty to fifty per cent expansion of production over peacetime levels.

Congress did this today:

1. The atomic bomb. A House subcommittee told President Truman we ought to keep the big secret while its future is studied. Then the House approved such a study. The Senate already has acted. Mr. Truman will give Congress his ideas on the bomb in a day or two.

2. Elliott Roosevelt's finances. The House Ways and Means committee came up with its reports today. It investigated a $200,000 loan to Elliott that was settled for $4,000. The Democratic majority reported that the lender, John Hartford, was justified in listing $196,000 as a bad debt on his income tax. But the Republican minority went to the late president's part. It said he influenced Hartford in making the loan. It also declared Elliott should pay taxes on the money if Hartford doesn't. The House gave no sign of further action.

3. Nominations. The Senate hasn't yet rejected a Truman nomination. But its Commerce committee refused 10 to 7 to recommend Raymond S. McKeough, of Illinois, for the Maritime Commission. Chairman Bailey (D-N.C.) blamed rivalry between unions for the adverse vote. McKeough was active in the CIO-PAC's political campaign last year.

4. Highways. The Senate seemed ready to cut the strings releasing a $3,000,000,000 public roads program. The House has approved. Action will be asked in the Senate Tuesday. The plan embraces a federal outlay of $1,673,250,000 over three years, matched by the states.

More about the administration's tax-cutting plan: It would take all income taxes off 12,000,000 people. It would do this by abolishing the three per cent normal tax on individuals.

The figures are Treasury Secretary Fred M. Vinson's. He also proposed Repealing the ninety-five per cent excess profits tax; reducing by half the luxury tax on many items in mid-1946.

However, Rep. Martin, of Massachusetts, Republican House leader, said it would not be enough to stimulate business and create jobs. His proposal: "We want at least a twenty per cent reduction all along the board."

Vinson urged caution. He cited the national debt. A $5,000,000,000 cut next year should be the maximum, he said.

Belgian Monarch Makes Strong Bid To Regain Throne

By REGINALD WILLIAMS

BRUSSELS, Oct. 1 (AP)—King Leopold III tonight made a strong bid to return to the throne from which the Belgian Parliament exiled him last July.

A royal proclamation, defending his activities during the German occupation, was issued here as word was received that the exiled monarch had arrived in Switzerland.

The monarch declared that from the time he was forced to capitulate to overwhelming German force in May, 1940, he had been determined to resist. He added that since then "I have done nothing else."

Leopold's proclamation, dated yesterday from St. Wolfgang, Austria, where he had resided since his country's liberation, was released through the semi-official Belgian news agency. Well-informed sources immediately interpreted it as the monarch's invitation to the people to summon him back to his throne.

The king pointed out that on May 25, 1940, shortly after the Belgian surrender, he had written King George VI of England asserting his intention to resist the Germans.

"I have never failed in this," he declared. "If I went to see Hitler at Berchtesgaden, it was only to better the lot of Belgian prisoners of war and obtain bread for your families."

"In staying in Belgium as a royal prisoner and at the same time refusing to resign under the Germans, despite all enemy solicitations, I not only saved the honor of my country but maintained its right and independence."

The Belgian monarch declared that when he capitulated "many Belgians did not know the true situation. They thought that I was betraying them and the echo of their voices makes me live again those terrible hours of 1940."

Americans Seek Jap Loot, Delve Into Shintoism

Banks Fail To Yield Treasure Stolen from Conquered Lands

TOKYO, Oct. 1 (AP)—American investigators set out today on the trail of the treasure which Japan looted from conquered lands, and also delved into the state religion of Shintoism which was used to foster fanaticism and wars.

In Tokyo's "Wall Street" the great Bank of Japan was closed. Army authorities declared it could reopen tomorrow if its officials quit stalling and helped track down the stolen riches of Asia.

The little people of Japan, who crowded about the bank fearful that their savings would be taken away, dispersed after the Americans assured them their money was safe.

In the vaults of this bank, financial keystone of the Japanese government comparable to the United States Federal Reserve System, troops found gold and gold stocks earmarked for Siam and Indo-China.

It was not immediately clear whether this gold belonged to the Japanese or had been seized from those formerly Japanese-controlled countries.

American troops stood guard over twenty-one financial institutions, which were closed at Gen. MacArthur's order Sunday.

The Yokohama Specie Bank and the Hypo Bank, which also were closed at MacArthur's swift, economic coup Sunday, reopened today.

No trace was found in their records of the wealth removed by the Japanese from the Philippines and the East Indies.

Simultaneously, MacArthur's civil information and education section prepared to deal a death blow to the Japanese government's control over Shintoism, which was artfully turned from the field of religion to war.

Col. Ken R. Dyke, head of the section, emphasized that no attempt would be made to interfere with the freedom of religion, but, "We are going to be certain it (Shintoism) isn't used as a tool of the militarists."

A second inquiry into the Japanese educational system is being made.

Connally Would Keep Atom Secret

CHICAGO, Oct. 1 (AP)—Chairman Tom Connally (D-Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, declared today that "we should not divulge the secret" of the atomic bomb to other nations.

Speaking at the United Nations Veterans' Victory Conference, curran raiser to the Veterans of Foreign Wars forty-sixth national encampment, Connally said:

"We should proceed immediately to set up appropriate machinery to work out plans for the control and use of atomic energy. We should not divulge the secret to other nations."

"We found it first. It is ours and the world can rest assured that we shall never use it except in our own necessary self-defense or in the interest of the peace of the world."

Then, with World War Two veterans from seventeen nations seated in places of honor, he said: "I hope I'm not striking a bum note here" and added:

"Frankly, there are nations in the world I wouldn't trust to restrict it to those two purposes. We have plenty of time to decide and consider to whom we will divulge the secret in an appropriate fashion."

Plane Crashes after 11 Occupants Bail Out near Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

WYOMING, Pa., Oct. 1 (AP)—Pennsylvania State Police reported tonight a B-25 army plane carrying nine passengers, including two WACs, and a crew of two crashed into Bald mountain, six miles east of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., late today.

The eleven bailed out after the plane ran out of gas and two were injured slightly. A state policeman who declined the use of his name identified the injured as Lt. Charles Riley, pilot, and Maj. Everett D. Farr, a passenger.

(At Middletown, Pa., air service command base, authorities said twelve persons were reported aboard the plane, enroute from Maxwell field, Montgomery, Ala., to Stewart field, West Point, N. Y., on a routine flight.)

The state policeman said Riley reported the plane arrived over

British Forces Hold Key Points In Dutch Indies

By VERN WAUGLAND

BATAVIA, Oct. 1 (AP)—British occupation forces, moving into the Netherlands East Indies, peacefully expanded their hold today on Batavia where independence-loving natives painted buildings with signs saying "We Don't Ask Freedom—We Are Entitled to It."

With Indonesians protesting the return of their Dutch rules, and with 35,000 Japanese troops still on the island, the situation is "potentially explosive" and "could lead to a horrible racial war," said Charles O. Van der Plas, senior representative of the Netherlands government in Java.

Indonesian leaders said they would fight rather than return to colonial status.

"We proclaimed our independence August 17," said Soe Karno, president of the "Republics of Indonesia." "We didn't like Japanese oppression and we don't want Dutch oppression either."

An official Dutch government broadcast described Soe Karno as a "full-blooded opportunist" and a Japanese puppet. The broadcast protested that Allied occupation forces were leaving him "to rule practically all the rich island of Java."

Van der Plas said he had invited Soe Karno and leaders of all other Indonesian political factions to meet with him to iron out current problems. Conferences between the Dutch and Indonesians were ordered by Lt. Gen. Sir Philip Christison, whose British forces are occupying key points on Java and Sumatra for the Allies.

"I feel," said Van der Plas, "that this part of the Dutch crown should be at the very shortest time completely independent but with an independence not based on violence or terrorism."

He predicted it would take several years to give the islands freedom—on an equal basis with the homeland and still under the Dutch crown.

"The most essential problem in the Pacific is disarming the Japanese and getting them out of Java," Van der Plas insisted. Already, he explained, some Nipponese have deserted their defeated army and are "making trouble."

Committee Would Outlaw Poll Tax

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—The Senate Judiciary committee took a stand against collection of poll taxes from voters in federal elections today but checked to the full Senate the question whether a ban should be by statute or constitutional amendment.

In a double-barreled action, the committee voted to report simultaneously to the Senate:

1. A House-approved bill which would declare it unlawful for any state or local government to prevent any persons from voting in a federal election because of failure to pay a poll tax.

2. A resolution by Sen. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) calling for submission to the states of a constitutional amendment declaring "the right of citizens x x x to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state by reason of failure to pay any tax on an account of any property qualification."

All signs are that the Senate will approve the constitutional amendment method when the issue is raised on the floor.

Fuel Consigned To Steel Mills Will Be Diverted To Gas Companies

Labor Department Talks of Hurrying Start of Labor Peace Conference Set for Nov. 4

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach tonight proposed appointment of an impartial arbitrator to make a binding decision in the oil strike by December.

Schwellenbach asked the CIO oil workers to return to work immediately and called on the oil industry management to resume full operations.

Pending a decision before the arbitrator, Schwellenbach asked that workers return to a forty hour week at a fifteen per cent basic pay rate increase.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—Coal and oil strikes were spreading tonight and the government took emergency action to prevent the kitchen gas ranges of eastern housewives from growing cold.

The Solid Fuels Administration, acting as a result of a coal mine foremen's strike, ordered coal shipments consigned to eastern steel mills diverted to gas utility plants.

It was explained that the government felt that gas pressure must remain steady because people must eat. Gas companies were said to have only a thirteen-day reserve supply of coal. Steel companies' supplies are little, if any, greater.

A conciliation conference trying to solve the CIO refinery strike struggled on into the evening without any immediate announcement. The strike threatened to lead tomorrow to large-scale work stoppages in California, major supplier of oil for the army and navy.

These were the high spots of the seething labor picture:

1. The Labor department talked of hurrying up the start of the national labor-management peace conference—now set for November 4—in view of the threat to reconversion caused by labor unrest.

2. The CIO Textile Workers union appealed to southern senators and representatives to form a commission to "deal with" the strike crisis in the textile industry, where four mills are already closed.

3. The AFL, Masters, Mates and Pilots of America petitioned the National Labor Relations Board for a strike vote to cover merchant ship officers of very American ship and port "with which we have a contract." The union objects to a federal wage decision.

4. The National Federation of Telephone Workers said the proposed brief "demonstration" walk-out of 200,000 telephone workers, in protest against an NLRB decision, will not take place before Wednesday.

5. John L. Lewis stayed mum as the hour of his proposed meeting with soft coal mine owners passed. The operators refused to come to Washington despite Lewis' threat of "action" by 400,000 United Mine Workers if they failed to negotiate on his drive to get recognition for the mine foremen's union.

6. Coal shipments for eastern steel mills were ordered diverted to gas utility plants because of spreading foremen's strikes. Solid Fuels Administration reported the shutdown involved 60,171 men and cost the country 1,128,000 tons of coal last week. A UMW official in Charleston said a shutdown of West Virginia's entire bituminous industry, employing 108,000, is possible "within the next few days."

Truman Makes History by Visiting Supreme Court's Opening Session

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—President Truman made history today by dropping in on the opening of the Supreme Court's new term to see his appointee, Harold H. Burton, become a member.

Court attaches said he was the first chief executive ever to appear in the courtroom while he held office.

Mr. Truman was given a seat reserved at the counsel table, directly in front of the high bench. Otherwise he was only a spectator.

The packed onlookers were startled and agape. Mr. Truman was not announced. The marshal simply called "Rise" and the president came in a side entrance eight minutes before noon.

He strode half-way across the red-carpeted courtroom to his seat opposite rock-coated Attorney General Tom Clark. Smiling, Mr. Truman turned from side to side in his seat, speaking and nodding to friends.

The president rose quickly with other spectators as the robed justices stepped through the red velvet curtains behind the bench at the stroke of 12. Members of the high court smiled quiet greeting. Stuffy, 57-year-old Burton, Re-

Trouble Spots in Areas Formerly Occupied by Japanese Grow Darker

By JAMES D. WHITE

Associate Press Staff Writer

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1 (AP)—Trouble spots grew darker in the Orient over the weekend.

They are not new. The Allies just uncover them as they move in, disarming Japanese troops and trying to pick up the pieces for each other and themselves.

Indo-China continues to be the most threatening area, with a thousand French troops about to arrive in Saigon, where they may face some 20,000 armed Annamese who don't want French rule to return.

The British commander at Saigon, who was sent in with a regiment of Indian troops to take over the southern half of a country of 24,000,000 people and disarm their Japanese conquerors, finds it necessary to use some of these Japanese troops to help maintain order. More than 300 people, including 100 Frenchmen, already have been killed in this area.

In the north, around Hanoi, Chinese occupation troops have declared themselves the supreme authority for the time being, and refuse to recognize one local Annamese independence movement (Viet Minh) which had set up a government under the Japanese.

The British have another headache in the Dutch East Indies, where they have gone into Batavia to take over from surrendering Japanese until Dutch forces can arrive. There another native independence movement has sprung up (establishing a "government" after Japan surrendered). It is headed by native leaders whom the Dutch claim are political nobodies who collaborated with the Japanese, but whom the British commander—again with only small forces at his disposal—insists the Dutch meet.

The Chinese, although taking over the northern half of Indo-China for the French, have had to accept American help in their own outlying areas and ask for it on the diplomatic front. Latest American landing in China is at Tientsin, where American marines are now ashore.

China meanwhile has asked the United States to ascertain from Siam exactly what has been going on in Bangkok, the Siamese capital, where there has been trouble between natives and the large Chinese minority. Chungking claims there are 2,000,000 Chinese in Siam.

Former Soldier, Starting New Job, Asks Girl To Wait

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I've been going with a young man who is 22 and I am 21 years old. He says he's in love with me and asked me to wait for him until he can offer me something besides love. He has just come home from the army, and is starting on a new job.

I do like him very much and enjoy his company, but something seems to hold me back. I can't explain what it is, but it stops me from telling him I love him. I want to be absolutely certain he's the one for me.

"I have a good job, and right now am earning more than he is. I want to travel—have always dreamed of that. I like nice clothes and expensive things. I know it sounds cold-hearted and selfish. I thought some day I'd like to settle down to a home and a family, but not until I have had what I want out of life, or until I find someone who will give me what I want."

"Do you think I'm right, or will I regret not having told him seriously? I haven't given him any answer."

KAY.
With the uncertainties you harbor concerning what you want in life and the present inability of this young man to give them, you are to be congratulated on being sufficiently sensible not to rush into matrimony. You say you have a good job, you want to travel, and you like expensive things. It would be very unfair to the nice young man, I think, who is honest enough to say he has nothing but his love to offer.

Wants To Renew Romance
Dear Miss Fairfax:
"When I was still in high school I fell in love with a girl in my class, but made the mistake of showing her how much she meant to me and she lost interest. I was very good to her and gave her gifts and took her out to school affairs and movies. It just about broke me all up when she told me she was interested in someone else. That was two years ago and I know she isn't married and that she doesn't go with anyone in particular.

"I haven't forgotten her, although I never see her, and think I still love her. I'm 21 now and she's 20. I've gone out with lots of girls, but don't care for any of them. I'd like to take her out again—would it be all right if I went over to see her? I know she'd like me a lot at one time."

F. G.
Of course, it would be all right for you to try to regain this girl's affection. Perhaps the reason she hasn't tried to see you is that she's ashamed of the way she acted in turning you down. If she does decide to renew your friendship, don't let it make you unhappy. Go out with other girls. Time can wear away love affairs even as the constant dripping of water will wear away a rock.

Dare to remember!
Dare to remember everything! That takes nerve. Easy enough to remember the pleasant times in life, the successes you've achieved, the compliments you've received, the good deeds you've done. But it's tough to remember the other times—the times you've blundered, made a fool of yourself.

"loo... at the bright side only."

But if you look at the bright side only you learn nothing about yourself, or life, and as a consequence you'll continue to commit stupid, silly and vicious acts. For the cause of them will still be in you.

You'll never prevent mistakes in the future unless you study the mistakes of the past.

Stop thinking of those past mistakes as blots on your records. As a matter of fact, a mistake is your greatest asset—if you'll use it right.

You can learn more from one painful mistake than you can from a thousand pleasant successes.

Dare to remember! Dare to remember everything! Dare to lift the curtain and face all the badness and madness and sadness that has come into your life.

Don't linger over it unnecessarily. Don't make a wallow of regret nor a racket of self-pity, but take a good, honest look. Stop making alibis. Stop blaming the other fellow. Admit your own responsibility for the things you have done.

Study why you did that thing of which you are ashamed. What secret weakness in your own makeup tricked you into it? Does that weakness still exist? If it does, you will surely make the same mistake again in some other form, unless you find and fight the flaw which caused it. Dare to remember everything. And, as you remember, dare to be proud.

You took a risk? And got yourself into a mess? Be proud because you had the courage to take that risk. Make up your mind to use better sense next time; but still be proud of the courage that forced that past blunder.

Be ashamed only of the times when you ducked life, and two-told yourself by your own cowardice.

And even dare to remember those times—with healing scorn. A live life is bound to make mistakes. Even God seems to have made a few Himself! Yet he goes right on turning us out with magnificent nonchalance. No hangovers of regret for Him. Survey your own past with nonchalance of a god. See everything. Admit everything. AND THEN—GET GOING!

Press Freedom Lesson Is Given in Tokyo

THE PROPHYLACTIC POWER of a free press is stressed in an Associated Press dispatch from Tokyo by Russell Brines and Duane Hennessey in which they summarize the facts that the Japanese people have learned more about their emperor in three moments of days than during all the previous years of unquestioned service in his name.

They learned, as press dispatches have noted, about the meeting arranged by Hirohito's request with Gen. MacArthur, and they found out, as the dispatch relates, that the man in whose name hundreds of thousands died in the past years—in a campaign which until six weeks ago the people were told was "victorious"—had gone to see his conqueror.

They learned of the unconfirmed reports about possible abdication by the emperor. They learned of the numerous problems of occupation and of the Japanese adherence to the Potsdam Declaration, which is technically in the emperor's hands. They were shocked by the Japanese home ministry's confiscation of the editions of the leading newspapers and the subsequent swift American action restoring the papers and stripping the government of all power to censor the press without American approval. They saw the picture of their emperor with MacArthur and undoubtedly were impressed with the showing that Hirohito was dwarfed in stature by the general.

In the past the Japanese had regarded Hirohito as a god, a mysterious, divine being, with human wants of divine origin, but now it was revealed that he is a rather ordinary head of state, saying publicly that he was fooled as badly as his subjects now feel they were at the outset of the war. "The extent of the shock upon the propagandized Nipponese, the dispatch states, 'is evidenced by the main-in-the-street reactions ranging from expression of belief that the emperor had lost face to statements that this heralded a new better period for Japan.'"

Here the power of a free press is emphatically manifested. It indicates a wholesome means of reconstructing Japan and abolishing its age-long primitive governmental ideology. It shows that if a salutary house-cleaning and a sensible civilized education of a backward, mist people can be thus so quickly advanced in Japan, it can be done elsewhere; that in short, if the people are allowed to know the truth, a tremendous motive for peace can be established.

The British Eye Our Gold Reserve

A WASHINGTON DISPATCH has disclosed that the British delegates who are seeking a huge loan or a grant from the United States are trying to warm up American financial experts to the idea of using a fraction of the country's twenty-billion dollar gold reserve as a basis for financial aid to Great Britain.

In fact, the dispatch says the financial experts have been so "warmed up" that to say, these financial experts, whoever they may be, see in the gold reserve a way to raise the funds required to help Britain without cost. If they could do this, of course, it would be much easier to sell to Congress and the American people the idea of making a substantial loan to Britain without cost.

But, this idea is fallacious. This gold reserve happens to be the collateral behind the gold certificates held by the Federal Reserve System. It may be likened, as the "New York Herald Tribune" points out, to the physical assets behind a warehouse receipt or the security behind a bank loan. And it reminds that the warehouseman caught tampering with the goods against which a warehouse receipt is issued, or the bank officer who is found to be borrowing part of the bank's loan collateral for his own uses has an excellent chance of winding up in jail. In short, any such procedure would be both illegal and immoral.

The British pleas for loans or grants should not be clouded with any such bald subterfuge. The question should be considered in its stark reality with the assets and resources and what is most important, the obligations of the United States in mind. Here is something on which there should be no beating around the bush.

Those "Concealed" Corporate Profits
ACCUSATIONS have been made, as part of the concerted drive for higher wages while the reconversion emergency affairs which is believed the golden opportunity, that industry has obtained huge "concealed" profits from the war.

of its common stock amounted to $300,000,000. As against this return to its 225,000 stockholders, the company paid out to its 215,000 employees $3,750,000,000 in wages, salaries, social security and pension costs, or twelve times that amount. As for General Motors, its president, Charles E. Wilson, points out that it voluntarily adopted a policy of self-limitation of profits, with the result that it retained only half the profit on each dollar of sales realized in the last pre-war year, 1941. Its war profits averaged 4.7 per cent from each dollar of sales. Of this, 3.2 cents were paid to stockholders, whose investment provided the facilities and tools to make jobs possible, and 1.5 cents were retained in the business for modernization and expansion of postwar plants. General Motors' profit limitation policy was established before Congress passed the reorganization act. It was considered so fair that the amount of profit so determined was accepted without and change for three successive years as the basis for concluding General Motors' profit reorganizations.

Stockholders in these and many other industrial concerns are quite aware of the policy generally followed of voluntarily relinquishing war profits. They have been told that this was pursued on the theory that, as Wilson said, "war is not prosperity but a national calamity requiring sacrifices by all in the common interest."

That, obviously, is sound, patriotic industrial leadership. Some corporations may not have been so endowed, but the results, so far as profit-making has been felt by stockholders, indicate that the policy was generally observed.

Tax Cuts Should Be On a Sound Basis

FEDERAL TAX REDUCTION looms large in Washington and it is encouraging to see that Republican congressional leaders have "jumped the gun" on administration members with a carefully studied plan to offset that decided upon by the majority.

The latter has had in mind a repeal of the three per cent normal tax on individual incomes, thus erasing some ten million low income persons from the tax rolls completely and reducing over-all tax liabilities by about two billions.

The "normal" tax, successor to the old "Victory" tax, is levied against income above $500 regardless of the taxpayers' number of dependents. An end of the war-imposed ninety-five per cent excess profits tax was also in mind.

Anticipating these recommendations, Chairman Reed (R-NY), of the House Republican Tax Study Committee, and Rep. Knutson, (R-Minn.), senior Republican on the tax-writing Ways and Means committee, told newspapermen they would battle in the committee and in the House for a straight twenty per cent tax cut for individuals, which is incontestably the fairer method, since the war burden is a burden of all. They also called for erasure of the handicapping excess profits taxes.

But the real milk in the coconut was expressed by these two tax reduction battlers. "We've got to release all the potential power of free enterprise and encourage risk investment," Reed said. "It is risk capital that makes jobs, and production is the answer to inflation."

"More elimination of the three per cent normal tax is not enough to release purchasing power and stimulate business," Knutson explained. Both are dead right in these statements.

But tax cuts cannot come alone, and the Republicans are on safe and sound ground in coupling their proposals with the demand that there must be retrenchment in federal expenditures. The two propositions, as Rep. Knutson declares, are inseparable.

Since almost all the Germans are declaring they were not Nazis and the Japs are insisting that they were all working for peace, it may be wondered just how the war got started anyway.

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND Truman Is Reported As Curt and Stern In Scolding Solons on Compensation Bill

By DREW PEARSON
WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Democratic members of the House Ways and Means committee last week saw President Truman, for the first time since he became president, hopping mad at Congress. They received a call Wednesday afternoon from Chairman "Muley" Bob Doughton, asking all Democrats to be at the White House at 10 the next morning. Having just agreed to shelve the Unemployment Compensation bill, they had a pretty clear idea of what was coming.

Little time was wasted in pleasantries. The president had only a curt nod or "Hello" for the members as they came in, then plunged at once into his subject. The unemployment compensation features provided in his message must be enacted, he said, before he could feel that Congress has done the job the people expect of it. For over forty-five minutes, the president sat and discussed the bill with the congressmen, and not a single smile cracked his face.

Trouble Noted
Closest he came to a smile was when he said: "President Roosevelt always used to rely upon the House to help him out against the Senate. I thought I could rely upon the Senate. But, the former senator from Missouri told me, 'I look like I'm having a little trouble there now.'"

He referred to the Senate's pruning of the original Unemployment Compensation bill offered by Senator Harley Kilgore, of West Virginia. Early in the conference, Representative Dingell, of Michigan; Eberhart, of Pennsylvania; and Ford, of Rhode Island, told the president that they agreed with his program and would like to see the House vote the $25 and twenty-six week provisions the Senate had knocked out. Chairman Doughton, half-hearted author of a bill including these provisions but not the full Kilgore bill, glared fiercely, while Ford reminded the president that he had himself introduced a bill calling for everything in the Kilgore bill.

Various members spoke up, trying to explain their positions. Chairman Doughton had grave doubts whether the $25 would not make the labor situation worse by stimulating idleness. However, the president refused arguments about strikes and states' rights even before they raised.

"This need of the American people—who worked hard all through the war—for a small measure of help in tiding them over this winter's unemployment—has nothing to do with strikes. Today's strikes are no argument so far as this bill is concerned."

Strike Action Coming
Cautiously, he added, "and I may

Not that the workers actually on strike would get any of the money Congress was asked to appropriate for under the unemployment system, for most of the states benefits are not paid to strikers. But strikes in one industry caused suspension of an entire automobile plant.

Thus the strikes were creating unemployment which would be a claim upon unemployment payments. Further, the strikes were postponing the whole process of the country's reconversion to peacetime production, and were thereby creating widespread and unnecessary unemployment.

Much "Bunk" Carried

The reasons for the Senate's overhauling of the Full Employment bill were different. The bill contained some provisions which could be useful and which entailed the support of conservatives. But it also contained much bunk. Some of this was in a prefatory and rhetorical declaration of purpose. As worded in the original form of the bill, before changes made during hearings, the preface read:

"All Americans able to work and seeking work have the right to useful, remunerative, regular and full-time employment; and it is the policy of the United States to assure the existence at all times of sufficient employment opportunities to enable all Americans who have finished their schooling and who do not have full-time housekeeping responsibilities freely to exercise this right."

Serious Interpretations

Read with a microscope, that could be interpreted in a way to be practicable. But a microscope might not be necessary for reading a statute. Misinterpretations to which the passage was subject are illustrated by the fact that a woman having part-time housekeeping responsibilities would nevertheless have a right to a job carrying full-time employment.

Other possible misinterpretations were more serious. Dispute over the word "assure" led a sponsor of the bill, Senator Murray, of Montana, to consult a dictionary, which showed that the word has two meanings. One is "make sure." The other is "give confidence." In the context, this difference went to the heart of the bill.

Much dispute arose from the word "right." By an interpretation that became widespread, a trusting young person might walk into a shop and address the owner thus: "I have finished my schooling and I do not have full-time housekeeping responsibilities; therefore I call upon you to give me a useful remunerative, regular and full-time job, as provided by the full employment law."

Socialism Underlying Issue

Such a young person would have learned what debate over the bill brought out, that a "right" to a job, in the legally enforceable sense, is not practicable in a country which has private ownership of industry, that it would only be practicable under state socialism. That the bill, by possible interpretations of some of its provisions, might lead toward state socialism, became the underlying issue in the hearings on it, the debate over it, and the changes made in it.

After substitution of clearer words for ones with flexible meanings, the elimination of some provisions and the insertion of others, the bill is practicable. It promises that government shall at all times follow such broad policies as are designed to create a condition of maximum employment by private industry. If in any year unemployment is anticipated, the government may plan, under strict limitations, public works to be carried out by private contractors.

Whether the memo was sent without Truman's reading it, or whether he read it too hastily, is not known. Either way, it proved a bombshell. Either way, also, some of Truman's senatorial friends are wondering whether the continued influence of the gentleman from Mississippi is healthy.

Mississippi Rule

Current wise-crack in the nation's capital: The northern carpet-baggers once invaded Mississippi, but now Mississippi has reversed it and recaptured Washington. Not only does George Allen hit at Truman's elbow, but Senator Bilbo, chairman of the District of Columbia committee, is virtual "mayor" of Washington, while the son of the late Senator Vardaman, of Mississippi, is Truman's navy aide.

Note — Chief Mississippi misadventurer around Washington is ex-Congressman Ross Collins, the man who forced the War department into spending money on the first Flying Fortress and who did so much to streamline the army.

Job Bill Changes Are Seen Making It Practicable

By MARK SULLIVAN
President Truman had recommended to Congress two measures strongly desired by labor leaders. One was, that the federal government should by gifts increase the payments made by the forty-eight states to unemployed workers. The other was the so-called "Full Employment" measure.

Last week the first of these was "shelved" by the House Ways and Means committee, postponed indefinitely. The second was reduced by the Senate to a point where all but ten of its original opponents were willing to vote for it.

Between Congress and the president, this was an early parting of the ways, with Mr. Truman going toward the political left, Congress toward the right. About its meaning, and what it portends, much will be written. What the present article deals with, however, is the reasons for Congress' actions on the two measures.

Disheartening Picture

On the day the bill for federal payments to unemployed workers was before the Ways and Means committee, the news channels of the country were flooded with accounts of strikes and threatened strikes. Here were labor leaders creating unemployment—and here was Congress asked to provide additional relief for the unemployment which the labor leaders created. That is

The "conservatives," who have been conditioned by years of New Dealism's trick phrases in statutes that were claimed to be harmless at first only to be made the basis of everything from an administrative order to a supreme court decision, thought they saw hidden devices to sabotage the free-enterprise system.

Some Basic Things Learned

The "liberals," on the other hand, started with the premise that government no longer will stand by and see widespread unemployment when a depression comes and that some sort of economic budget for the nation could be issued each year to which all segments of the free-enterprise system plus the government would subscribe.

Whatever the motives or suspicious or ambitions of either side with respect to the other, the fact is that World War II, like World War I, taught the American people certain basic things about full production for war and it is the mobilization of this knowledge continuously in a sort of economic inspection which the "liberals" think—and with some justification—will aid our economic system to mitigate the painful swings in the business cycle from abnormal booms to abnormal depressions.

Constructive Command

The mere command by the national government to the Budget Bureau or any other of the statistical agencies to bring to light certain essential facts about the interdependence of agriculture, manufacturing, distribution, finance, and the service industries is bound to be constructive. Where the "full employment" bill got off to a bad start was in the use of the slogan to give the impression that by some miracle the federal government was about to provide jobs for all including compensation for those who didn't care to work at any job.

The use of vague phrases pledging the federal government to provide jobs if private industry cannot or does not do so was also a mistake made by the proponents of the measure. If the bill had been set forth as an act to make the private-enterprise system function to provide incentive taxation and to eliminate unnecessary barriers by government to the working of the free-enterprise system, it would have been hailed by the conservatives as a fine piece of legislation.

And yet in order to accomplish those very objectives, there must be in government some kind of overall view of what the economic machine can or may do each year to provide the maximum number of jobs.

Like Ship without Rudder

Clearly an economic system without some guiding influence is like a ship without a rudder. If the labor group insists on steering the boat to higher and higher wages without corresponding increases in output or efficiency, if the sellers insist on as high a price as they wish, if each group wants a free hand with no restraint upon it in

It Says Here

Managed to get in a little golf in England on my last trip. Played by a foursome with some British noblemen and it was really fun . . . although, about the seventeenth hole, their bags began getting heavy.

They have a lot of quaint golfing expressions. They call the green the "pretty," the cup of the "tin," and golfers like me the same thing they do over here.

They were good golfers, but I was really in there pitching. I found out I could throw the ball farther than I could hit it.

We had quite a gallery following us and when I sliced my first ball into the rough, every eye was on me . . . so I had to play it where it was.

My caddy was an irritating little cockney . . . kept insisting that six and one made seven.

Coming up to the eighteenth hole, I was three over, two under, and one through the clubhouse. But it was an event I'll long remember. I was the first actor ever allowed to play the course, they told me on the first tee . . . and the last one, they told me on the second.

And I found out why they call them peers. Every time I sliced the ball into the woods, they'd peer in and see that I didn't move it.

the public interest, economic anarchy—otherwise known as depression—is inevitable.

The cure does not lie in a planned economy wherein the government tries to run the machine. But it does lie in a self-balanced economy when all the facts and all the danger signals have been given the widest publicity. The so-called "full employment" bill is in reality a measure to promote the fullest publicity about our self-operating economic system. It could lead to greater controls by the government if the facts prove that the citizens are not running the economic machine without collisions and it could lead to longer periods of prosperity if the various groups learned to heed unbiased facts collected and proclaimed by government.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The most significant debate in Congress in recent years turns out a piece of legislation which all sides profess to be innocuous.

The measure to provide a means of bringing about "full employment" comes out of the Senate minus the so-called guarantees of jobs, minus the pledge of huge expenditures and of public works programs and yet it is welcomed by its proponents as better than no measure at all. The paradox is readily explained.

Fighting Dogfaces Want No Pity, All They Ask Is "Understanding"

Instalment I
(Editor's Note—This is the first of a series of sixteen articles taken from Sergeant Mauldin's best-selling book and illustrated with some of his famous war-time cartoons.)

My business is drawing, not writing, and this text is pretty much background for the drawings. I would like to thank the people who encouraged me to draw army cartoons at a time when the gag man's conception of the army was one of mean old sergeants and jeeps which jump over mountains. They not only encouraged me, but I know that they backed me up when the drawings did not meet with unanimous approval from high brass. Many of these friends have been brass themselves, and I'm afraid that sometimes the drawings bit the hands that fed them. I wish there were some way to repay these people.

About all I can say is thanks to those I know about and many I don't know—soldiers, officers, and others—because they encouraged me to draw pictures of an army full of blunders and inefficiency, irritations and comradeship. But, most of all, full of men able to fight a ruthless war against ruthless enemies, and still grin at themselves.

I'm convinced that the infantry is the group in the army which gives more and gets less than anybody else. I drew pictures for and about the dogfaces because I knew what their life was like and I understood their gripes.

But there are some people who object to writers and artists who consistently publicize one branch of the army. They say that such exclusive attention lowers the morale of the branches not publicized, and that it makes for self-pity in the branch whose troubles are aired. Maybe they are right. But I understand the infantry well enough to know that very few combat men are going to pity themselves more because their gripes are printed in a newspaper.

I felt I was in a pretty good spot to judge any effect the cartoons might have had on the morale of the rear echelon, since a lot of my time in the rear was spent pestering ordnance companies to work on my jeep, and bumming cigarettes and condensed milk from ration dumps. The guys back there never showed any inclination to lynch me—as a matter of fact, they had heard I was in disfavor with a general, and when I came around for a new carburetor jet or more smokes, they gave me stories about conditions in the rear, and ideas for cartoons.

Dogfaces Need Understanding
I haven't tried to picture the war in a big, broad-minded way. My reactions were those of a young guy who was exposed to some of it, and I tried to put those reactions in my drawings.

Nobody who saw the war could be quite about it while it was going on. The only way I could try to be a little funny was to make something out of the humorous situations which come up even when you don't think life could be any more miserable. It's pretty heavy humor, and it doesn't seem funny at all sometimes when you stop and think it over.

After my drawings started kicking around in some papers in the states, a lot of dogfaces were very surprised, and so was I. If it meant that people were interested in seeing how the dogfaces looked at themselves, that's swell. If it meant that people at home were beginning to understand these strange mud-caked creatures who fought the war, and were beginning to understand their minds and their type of humor, that's even more swell, because it meant that the dogfaces were beginning to be appreciated a little by their countrymen.

They are very different now from what they were when they left home. Don't let anybody tell you they aren't. They need a lot of people speaking for them and telling about them—not speaking for fancy bonuses and extra privileges. You can't pay in money for what they have done. They need people telling about them so that they will be taken back into their civilian lives and given a chance to be themselves again.

One of the foremost objections to a steady portrayal of the troubles and lives of combat infantrymen and those who work with them—medical aid men, combat engineers, artillery observers, and others—has been that these guys are going to feel that the nation owes them a living, and that they will become "social problems." This feeling has been so strong in some places that veteran combat men are looked at askance by worried and peaceable citizens. That's a sad thing for a guy who was sent off to war with a blast of patriotic music, and it's really not necessary.

There will be a few problems, undoubtedly. But the vast majority of combat men are going to be no problem at all. They are so damned sick and tired of having their noses rubbed in a stinking war that their only ambition will be to forget it. They don't need pity, because you don't pity brave men—men who are brave because they fight while they are scared to death. They simply need bosses who will give them a little time to adjust their minds and their hands, and women who are faithful to them, and friends and families who stay by them until they are the same guys who left years ago. No set of laws or Bill of Rights for returning veterans can do that job. Only their own people can do it.

Character of Combat Man
Many celebrities and self-appointed authorities returned from quick tours of war zones (some of them getting within hearing distance of the shooting) and put out their personal theories to batteries of photographers and reporters. Some said the American soldier was the same clean-cut young man who left his home.

They were wrong. The combat man isn't the same clean-cut lad because you don't fight a kraut by Marquis of Queensberry rules. You shoot him in the back, you blow him apart with mines, you kill or maim him the quickest and most effective way you can with the least danger to yourself. He does the same to you. He tricks you and cheats you, and if you don't beat him at his own game, you don't live to appreciate your own nobleness.

But you don't become a killer. No normal man who has smelled and associated with death ever wants to see any more of it. In fact, the only men who are even going to want to bloody noses in a fist fight will be those who want people to think they were tough combat men, when they weren't. The surest way to become a pacifist is to join the infantry.

I didn't make the infantryman look noble, because he couldn't look noble even if he tried. Still there is a certain nobility and dignity in combat soldiers and medical aid men with dirt in their ears. They are rough and their language gets coarse because they live a life stripped of convention and niceties. Their nobility and dignity come from the way they live unselfishly and risk their lives to help each other.

There are gentlemen and bores; intelligent ones and stupid ones; talented ones and inefficient ones. But when they are all together and they are fighting, despite their griping and goldbricking and mortal fear, they are facing cold steel and screaming lead and hard enemies, and they are advancing and beating the hell out of the opposition. They wish to hell they were someplace else, and they wish to hell they would get relief. They wish to hell the mud was dry and they wish to hell their coffee was hot. They want to go home. But they stay in their wet holes and fight, and they climb out and crawl through minefields and fight some more.

by BILL MAULDIN

Soldiers Versus Officers

I know that my pictures have offended some people, and I don't blame a lot of them. Some men in the army love their profession, and without those men to build the army we'd be in a sad fix indeed. Some of them I do blame, because the pictures don't offend their pride in their profession—they only puncture their stiff shirt fronts. I love to draw pictures that offend such guys, because it's fun to hear them squawk.

I'm sorry if I disturbed the others, but they seldom complained. They know that if their men had a gripe, it was not good for them to sit in their holes and brood about and work up steam. If they blew that steam off a little bit, whether it was with stories or pictures or cartoons, then they felt better inside.

Not all colonels and generals and lieutenants are good. While the army is pretty efficient about making and breaking good and bad people, no organization of eight million is going to be perfect. Ours are not professional soldiers. They recently came from a life where they could cuss and criticize their bosses and politicians at war. They realize that an army is held together with discipline, and they know they must have authority. They accept orders and restrictions, but because they are fundamentally democratic, the insignia on the shoulders of their officers sometimes look a hell of a lot like chips.

Holy Cross Coach Says Scrimmage Is Unnecessary

DaGrosa Declares Football Is a Game and Should Be Played as Such

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. (P) John (Ox) Da Grossa, fast-talking Holy Cross coach, knocked the props out from under one of football's fundamentals today when he insisted that strenuous contact work was not only unnecessary but undesirable in preparation for game action.

Speaking at the weekly luncheon of the New York Football Writers' Association, Da Grossa said: "I do not believe in scrimmage. I believe in American boys, but I don't think you have to knock their brains out to teach them to play football."

In the year of Holy Cross team, the coach said, had no scrimmage nor tackling practice from the time drills started until last Saturday's opening game against Dartmouth.

"What's more," he added, "we have a better record against Yale Saturday and we're not practicing today or tomorrow."

Da Grossa's theories call for individual and "departmental" instruction and for close personal relations between coaches and players, enabling a coach to draw on his football knowledge without too much effort.

"I still think this is a game and we should play it as a game," he said.

Bama To Play Louisiana

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 1 (AP)—Coach Wally Butts, of the Georgia Bulldogs, says the Southeastern Conference championship may hinge on the outcome of the Alabama-Louisiana State football game at Baton Rouge Saturday night.

Speaking before the Birmingham Quarterback Club, the Georgia coach named Tennessee and Georgia Tech as other teams "in the first group."

And MacArthur has done the same."

Card of Thanks

We wish at this time to thank our many friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy shown to us during the recent bereavement, the death of our beloved mother, Harriett Tewel. We also wish to thank the members of the choir, who sang the funeral service, and the many friends who sent floral tributes and tokens of sympathy.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Adda (Wharton) Koons who departed this life 13 years ago Oct. 1, 1932.

Her noble head embowed by years, Her beautiful eyes all filled with tears, Her lovely face, its features sad, Yet it wasn't her looks that made me glad.

A generous heart a noble mind, Always gentle, always kind, Ever smiling, never sad, Yet it wasn't her virtues that made me glad.

What was it then that made me glad, It was just her presence ever near, It meant a lot to have her near.

Even now when we're far apart, Her memory locked deep in my heart, I know she'll worry and work no more, For she's found her peace on the Heavenly shore.

Bodily missed by her children, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Wharton and her sisters and brothers.

Harry Footer, 78, Bank President, Taken by Death

Well Known Businessman Was Native of Yorkshire County, England

Harry Footer, 78, president of the Peoples Bank of Cumberland, one of the city's best known businessmen, died last evening at 7:30 o'clock at his home, 812 Buckingham road, the Dingle, after a brief illness. He had been in failing health for about two years.

A native of England, he was born April 12, 1867, in Yeading, Yorkshire county, and came to this country, at the age of 5, with his parents, the late Thomas and Elizabeth Booth Footer.

He was general manager and secretary-treasurer of the Footer Dye Works, founded here by his father, and was affiliated with the company for thirty-five years.

Was Active Banker
Mr. Footer was also a director of the Community Baking Company and was president of the Mutual Building Association until 1943 when the Association was incorporated into the Peoples Bank.

One of the organizers of the Peoples Bank, Mr. Footer was vice president of the company from 1920 until 1924 when, upon the death of George Landwehr, he was elected president.

He was also the principal owner of Harry Footer and Company, this city, which was established in 1936.

The local man was well known as an amateur astronomer and donated his observatory to Allegheny high school in 1937 after his sight began to fail.

He was also the first male stenographer in this city, and was employed in that capacity by the old Orrick Wholesale Company.

Was Active Mason
An active Mason, he was the only thirty-second degree Scottish rite Mason in this city. He was a member of Port Cumberland Lodge No. 211, A. F. and A. M., Chosen Friends Lodge No. 34, I. O. O. F., and Cumberland Lodge No. 63, B. P. O. Elks.

Mr. Footer was a communicant of the Episcopal church.

Mr. Footer was known in banking circles here as a strong advocate of the "little fellow" and advocated the latest banking methods. He predicted a bright future for America and declared that the future would bring greater opportunities for all.

On December 24, 1888, he married Miss Mary Elizabeth Turner, who died February 6, 1925.

Also surviving are four grandchildren, Mrs. Martha Lee Watring, this city; Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Chaney, Frostburg; Harry Footer Chaney, and Patricia Ann Chaney, both of this city, and one great grandchild.

Food Handlers' Training Course To Begin Friday

Four Lectures Will Be Delivered by Local Health Officials

A training course of four lectures for all food handlers, owners and managers of local restaurants will begin Friday with a lecture from 8 to 9 p. m. in the city hall auditorium. J. Byron Dowling, state sanitarian, announced yesterday.

The course, which is being held in connection with the current survey of eating and drinking places by the Cumberland Health Department, will be conducted by Dr. Winter R. Frantz, city and county health officer; Mel M. Miller, Jr. of the United States Public Health Service; and Dowling.

100 Persons To Attend
Dowling said that approximately 100 persons have indicated that they plan to attend the lectures.

The three additional lectures will be held October 12, 19 and 26 in city hall auditorium at 8 p. m. Slides and films will be shown to illustrate the lectures.

The first lecture will be divided into two topics, "Sanitary Measures Hold Restaurant Customers," and "Our Health in Your Hands." The first of the two topics will be an introductory discussion, while the second will consist of an explanation of diseases caused by germs and the part restaurant employees can play in protecting the health of customers by following correct sanitation practices.

Other Topics Cited
"Service with a Smile," the subject of the second session, will include a discussion of the need for personal health and cleanliness on the part of restaurant employees and methods of serving food in a sanitary manner.

The third lecture, "In Hot Water," will describe the correct way to wash dishes, and how to handle and store them. Hand disinfecting will be illustrated step by step, while a briefers session will show the operation of a single-tank dishwashing machine.

"Safe Food for Good Health," the topic of the final lecture, will consist of recommendations as to safe buying, safe preparation and safe serving of food, as well as a discussion of methods of protecting food from contamination.

Certificates will be presented to those who complete the course satisfactorily, Dowling said.
